Nordea brings Google Pay to customers

Nordea expands its digital payment offering by adding Google Pay, a mobile payment solution for Android phones. Nordea customers in all Nordic countries can now use Google Pay at contactless payment terminals and in apps and online stores.

- We want to make everyday life easier for our customers. Mobile payment is a very convenient way to make everyday purchases without carrying your wallet with you, at all times. Mobile payment is easy, accessible and secure – and that's what our customers want, says Topi Manner, Head of Personal Banking at Nordea.

The launch of Google Pay follows the launches of several digital payment solutions in recent time. Customers that uses Android devices can now also enjoy making mobile payments that are fast, easy and secure.

- For Nordea, it's all about giving customers access to the same modern and secure ways of making payments regardless of the device they choose to use, says Topi Manner.

All Nordea's consumer cards and Nordea First Card can be added to Google Pay.

- As the frontrunner of the digital transformation of banking, it's important to offer a complete range of digital payment solutions to all customers. No other Nordic bank can match our broad range of digital payment solutions on all Nordic markets, says Erik Zingmark, Head of Transaction Banking at Nordea.

Google Pay also brings great benefits for corporations since corporate cards can be added. Regardless if employees use plastic cards or Google Pay, all purchases end up on the same invoice. It therefore creates less administration and makes life easier for employees when travelling or making expenses on behalf of the company.
