Instructions and definitions

Instructions part 1: Data handling and protection

- A. As a data controller Nordea Bank Abp processes personal data to deliver the products and services that are agreed between the parties and for other purposes, such as to help you with your request or comply with laws and other regulations. For detailed information on Nordea Bank Abp's processing of personal data, please review Nordea's privacy policy, which is available on Nordea's website or by contacting Nordea Bank Abp. The privacy policy contains information about the rights in connection with the processing of personal data, such as the access to information, rectification, data portability, etc.

Instructions part 2: Tax residency

- A. You are generally considered a U.S. tax resident if you:
- are a U.S. citizen including individuals with dual citizenships,
 - are a U.S. resident,
 - hold a U.S. residence permit or U.S. work permit (Green Card), or
 - were born in the U.S.
- B. You are generally considered a Finnish tax resident if you:
- have your permanent home in Finland, or
 - your continuous stay in Finland exceeds six months. Temporary absence from Finland does not break a continuous stay.
- A Finnish citizen who has moved abroad can be considered a Finnish tax resident during the moving year and the three following calendar years unless he/she can show that he/she does not have any significant connections to Finland (property, family, employment or important assets).
- C. Tax residency in other countries:
- It is possible to simultaneously be tax resident in several countries depending on each specific country's laws and regulations. In general, your tax residency is the country of your permanent residence or whereabouts. However, each country has its own set of rules for determining tax residence. Solely due to the fact that you pay tax on your property or withholding tax from yields on securities, you are not considered tax resident in that country. For more information on tax residency rules in specific jurisdictions, please visit the OECD Automatic Exchange Portal at: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/crs-implementation-and-assistance/tax-residency/#d.en.347760>

Instructions part 3: Taxpayer identification number (TIN)

- A. Taxpayer Identification numbers
- In the U.S. your TIN is usually your U.S. Social Security Number. Under certain circumstances, a functional equivalent is issued.
 - In Finland your TIN is your Finnish Personal Identification Code (henkilötunnus, personbeteckning).
 - In other countries TINs vary but is often a national identification number or national insurance number.
- Further details of jurisdiction-specific TIN formats can be found on OECD's webpage: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/crs-implementation-and-assistance/tax-identification-numbers/>

Instructions part 4: Legal background

- A. Common Reporting Standard (CRS)
- CRS was prepared by the OECD and is a global standard for the automatic transfer of financial account information with the purpose of preventing tax evasion. According to the CRS Financial Institutions are required to identify individuals and entity customers with tax residencies in other countries than the bank country. The Financial Institution is required to share information about customers with foreign tax residencies with the local tax authorities. This implies that if the customer has tax residence in any other country than Finland, Nordea is obliged to share the information stated in this form and file annual reports regarding the customer account/products to the Finnish Tax Authority who will transfer the information to other CRS participating countries. For further information visit this link: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/about-automatic-exchange/>
- B. Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (FATCA)
- FATCA is a tax treaty which Finland and the U.S. have signed to prevent tax evasion. It imposes the following legal requirements:
- Financial institutions are required to identify financial products held by U.S. persons
 - Financial institutions are required to provide the Tax Administration information on the identified financial products and U.S. customers
 - The Tax Administration is then required to convey the information to the U.S. tax authorities.
- In Finnish legislation, regulations concerning FATCA are included in section 17a of the Taxation Procedure Act (155/2015) and the Tax Administration's decision concerning the duty to disclose based on the FATCA agreement (A38/200/2015).
