For detailed information on Nordea Bank Abp, filial i Norge processing of personal data, please review Nordea's privacy policy, which is available on Nordea's website or by contacting Nordea Bank Abp, filial i Norge. The privacy policy contains information about the rights in connection with the processing of personal data, such as the access to information, rectification, data portability, etc.

Instructions part 2: Tax residency

- A. You are generally considered U.S. tax resident if you:
- are a U.S. citizen including individuals with dual citizenships,
  - are a U.S. resident,
  - hold a U.S. residence permit or U.S. work permit (Green Card), or
  - were born in the U.S.
- B. You are generally considered tax resident in Norway if your:
- accumulative stay in Norway exceed 183 days during any 12-month period, or
  - your accumulative stay in Norway exceed 270 days during any 36-month period.

In case of permanent residence abroad, Norwegian tax residency expires the fiscal year it is proved that your accumulative stays in Norway do not exceed 61 days during the respective fiscal year, and that you or your close associates do not retain a residence in Norway at your disposal. The residence does not cease, however, until you or your close associates no longer have housing in Norway. If you have been resident in Norway for 10 or more years before you moved permanently abroad, your tax residency in Norway ceases after the expiry of the third income year after relocation. This is reimbursed for each of the three fiscal years that you have not stayed in Norway for one or more periods exceeding 61 days in the income year, and that you or your close associates do not retain a residence in Norway at your disposal. By close associates is meant spouse, cohabitant or underage children.

- C. Tax residency in other countries:

It is possible to simultaneously be a tax resident in several countries depending on each specific country's laws and regulations. In general, one's tax residency is the country of one's permanent residence or whereabouts. However, each country has its own laws for determining tax residence. Solely due to the fact that you pay tax on your property or withholding tax from yields on securities, you are not considered tax resident in the country. For more information on tax residency in a specific jurisdiction, please visit the OECD Automatic Exchange Portal at: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/crs-implementation-and-assistance/tax-residency/#d.en.347760>

Instructions part 3: Taxpayer identification number (TIN)

- A. Taxpayer Identification numbers
- In the U.S. your TIN is usually your U.S. Social Security Number. Under certain circumstances, a functional equivalent is issued.
  - In Norway your TIN is your Norwegian national identity number or D-number.
  - In other countries TINs vary but are often a national identification number or national insurance number.

Instructions part 4: Legislative background

- A. Common Reporting Standard (CRS)

CRS was developed by the OECD and is a global standard for automatic transfer of financial account information to prevent tax evasion. In accordance with CRS, Financial Institutions are required to identify individuals and entities with foreign tax residencies and report this information to the Norwegian tax authorities. This means that if the customer has tax residency in any other country than Norway, Nordea must share the information stated in this form, and then file annual reports regarding the customer's account and products to the Norwegian tax authorities. In turn, the Norwegian tax authorities will transfer the information to the relevant CRS participating jurisdictions. For further information on CRS please access the following website: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/about-automatic-exchange/>

- B. Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (FATCA)

FATCA is a tax treaty which Norway and the U.S. have signed. The agreement imposes the following obligations:

- Financial institutions are required to identify financial products held by U.S. persons
- Financial institutions are required to provide the Tax Administration information on the identified financial products and U.S. customers
- The Tax Administration is then required to convey the information to the U.S. tax authorities.
